HE SO ADVISES THE GOVERNOR.

If the Women Are Taken His Excellency Will Send Troops, But Not from Richmond-Judge Orgain's Position in the Matter.

Attorney-General Scott has furnished the Governor with his opinion in the matter of the necessity of the Pollard murderers being taken to Lunenburg Courthouse, so as to be present on Monday, when counsel for the prosecution will submit a motion to so amend the record as to show that the juries in the several were actually in charge of the Sheriff when not directly engaged in the trials. Major Scott says in his letter to the Governor, as anticipated in yesterday's Dispatch, that after having fully examined the law bearing upon the question he is convinced that there is no need that the prisoners should be present.

It would seem, though, that the convicted murderers will be taken to Lunen burg, as Judge Orgain insists that he will not revoke his order requiring the Sheriff to bring them to the court. He Sheriff to bring them to the court. He was interviewed by the Dispatch's Meherin correspondent Wednesday, and reiterated his assertion that the prisoners must be in court when the motion is heard. The position of the Judge is that it is contrary to the law for prisoners in a felony case to waive their rights after an arraignment, and, besides, there were errors in the petitions.

It is understood that the Governor is very much opposed to the prisoners being

"We, as counsel for these prisoners, respectively request you to aid us in avoiding the necessary expense and trouble of having them conveyed to the County Court of Unnenburg. A military escort will be indispensable for their protection, and the expense incurred to the Commonwealth very great. In addition, the prisoners would be subjected to the torture of apprehension, which should be avoided in the interest of humanity, if possible. We have received no reply to the communications sent to Judge Orgain, and, therefore, do not know what his curpose is, but we are persuaded, that with your assistance, our request would be granted by the Judge." Mr. W. M. Justis, counsel for Marable, has since united in this petition and waived all rights that his client may have in the premises.

The Governor is equally as firm as Judge Orgain, and, while he has no power to hold the prisoners here, he will to hold the prisoners here, he will not let them go without a military escort. ## INSPECTION OF THE POLICE.

Mayor Taylor Reviews Them and Makes an Encouraging Address.

The fall inspection of the Richmond police took place in front of the City Hall at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The review was made by Mayor Richard M. Taylor in the presence of the other members of the Board of Police Commission. Ts, the Chief of Police, several of the Fire Commissioners, and the Chief of the Fire Department. There were ninety-two officers and men in line. They were in full-dress uniform, and looked in every way the splendid body of men that they are. After the inspection Mayor Taylor made a very nice little speech, in which he complimented the department and the men for their valuable services, for the manner in which they had invariably performed their duty, and for their integrity as citizens. The review was made by Mayor Richard integrity as citizens,

There was a meeting of the Police Board after the inspection, but only rou-tine business was transacted.

an, of New York, and Mr. J. B. Ellison man, of New York, and Mr. J. B. Ellison, of Philadelphia. All the visitors were delighted with the courtesy and hospitality shown them during their short sojourn here. Mr. Juan A. Smith, of Brooklyn, the usher who had one of his arms broken in the complimentary chase of the Deep-Run Hunt Club on Wednesday afternoon, surprised his friends by getting up and preparing to take his position in the bridal procession, which he did with becoming grace and chivalry. He displayed remarkable determination and courage, and was able to take his departure last evening with the other visitors from the North. It had been arranged that Mr. James De Kay, of New York, should take Mr. Smith's place as usher, in event he was unable to be on hand.

usher, in event he was unable to be on hand.

A singular fact in connection with this wedding is that a series of accidents preceded it. First, Miss Langhorne and Mr. Gibson were hurt in a runaway near the country home of Mr. Langhorne. Mr. Tompkins McIwaine, of New York, one of the ushers, had one of his eyes badly bruised by his horse in New York city on Tuesday afternoon. Then on the following day, Mr. Smith had his arm Sroken. On Wednesday night Miss Pemberton, while dancing on the roof garden at the Jefferson, quite painfully injured one of her ankles, and was compelled to come into the church yesterday carrying a cane.

MRS. CHARLES DANA GIBSON. Notwithstanding all these vicissitudes the wedding took place without a hitch, and Mr. Charles Dana Gibson has as his and Mr. Charles Dana Gibson has as his bride one of the most beautiful and popular women in America. Miss Irene Langhorne (now Mrs. Gibson) has for several years been distinguished as a great belle in her own State and her home city, not simply because she is a woman of lovely lace and form, but because also of her splendid mental attainments, her charmens her capalle nature, and her ing manners, her gentle nature, and her amiability and sweetness toward all of her wide circle of acquaintances. She is one of the few beautiful women whose popularity extended into all classes of society, and her departure from Richmond to live leaves vacant in the hearts of these people a place which it will be very difficult for any one else to fill. But the fame of Mr. Gibson's bride as a beautiful women does not simply extend to the borders of Virginia. She has tend to the borders of Virginia. She has many times been designated by metropolitan papers as the most handsome woman in America. She has been prounent in many social functions here and elsewhere. She led the Patriarch's ball in New York in 1894, the cotilion at the Philadelphia Assembly in 1896, and the Carnival german, at New Orleans, last year. She also led the Saraband, which was given for the Daughters of the Revyear. She also led the Saraband, which was given for the Daughters of the Revolution in this city. She has taken part in drama and opera here, having appeared as the widow in "Highest Bidder," Vloiet in "Our Boys," and last year made a wonderful hit as Germaine in the opera "Chimes of Normandy," the bride in public print is repugnant to her nature, as is recognized by all who know her well. Her personal beauty, as great as it is, is surpassed by the loveli-ness of her character; for of her it may be truly said in the language of the poet, "Simplex munditiss." With all the attention and admiration that have been nestowed upon her, she is as simple and unaffected as when as a girl these traits distinguished her. Her wishes in regard to not appearing in public print would be respected, certainly in Virginia were it not that she is one of Virginia's fair-est daughters, of whom her people feel justly proud, and she is claimed as a thorough type of their womanhood.

Miss Langhorne and Mr. Gibson met for the first time at the Horse-Show in New York, just a year ago, and he found a requital of his love at Mirador in June last.

MR. CHARLES DANA GIBSON, The groom, though yet a young man, has already made himself famous the world over as an artist, His conception of the heroic "American Girl" is a creation of beautiful and majestic womanhood that has been adopted as a national type. His cartoons of the various phases of American social life are true to life and leave upon him fame as well as a great many enemies. As an illustrator, Mr. Gibson also figures among the fore-most artists of this country and Europe. Because of the strong character in his drawlings he has been aptly called the Du Maurier of America.

Du Maurier of America.

Mr. Gibson was born about 30 years ago. He belonged to a family with high social connections in New York city, and he did not want for a good education. His inclinations were, however, artistic, and he gave up all idea of the business career that had been laid out for him. and he gave up all idea of the business career that had been laid out for him. It was not long before his genius developed, and he struggled some time before his gifts were discovered. He went to the comic periodical, "Life," with a drawing from which he hoped to realize 50 cents. When he received $4 for the drawing, he felt that success was assured for him. The acceptance of his drawing was soon followed by $n offer of a permanent position. Now, the artist receives a handsome income from his work, about $5,000 per year, and, as he is a healthy, wholesome, young man, he wilf-soon have an independent fortune. After spending the years crowded with success in New York, Mr. Gibson wem abroad last winter, spending the season in Paris with Richard Harding Davis. The artist went in quest of subjects with which to illustrate the writings of Mr. Davis, and the new successes he scored are to be found in the leading periodicals issued during the past spring and summer. From under the noses of Parisan artists, Mr. Gibson picked striking subjects that had long been given up as commonplace. The Grisette, the Parisian Actress, and Mondaine were brought into a new artistic light, and termed "some of Gibson's new girls." On his extended bridal tour he will, no doubt, acquire much valuable information and inspiration for the work of his choice. tion for the work of his choice,

Another distinguished member of the party was Mr. Stanford White, of New York, a member of the widely-known architectural firm of McKim, Meade & White. Among Mr. White's most conspicuous pieces of work are the Washington Memorial arch in Washington Square and the Madison-Square Garden, while his firm provided the plans for the Boston Library, which' is one of the handsomest buildings in this country.

Another of Mr. Gibson's ushers was Mr. Thomas Hastings, of the architectural firm of Carere & Hastings, who drew the plans for the Jefferson, the Commonwealth Club, and the Ponce de Leon Hotel.

Mr. Robert Howard Russell, of New York, was among the visitors. Mr. Russell is a prominent publisher and author, while Mr. T. F. Sykes, of Plainfield, N. J., one of the ushers, has long been connected with the comic paper Life.

Among the indies in the party was Miss Benedict, of New York, probably Mrs. Grover Cleveland's most intimate personal friend. The other ladies are all well and popularly known, and their presence added much to the brilliancy and success of the many entertainments given in honor of the nuptials.

AN INFORMAL DANCE.

AN INFORMAL DANCE. On Wednesday night Mr. and Mrs. Stanford White and Mr. James L. Breese, of New York, gave an informal dance on the roof garden of the Jefferson to the New York party, the bridal party, and the following ladies and gentlemen; Mrs.

AN EXCITING INCIDENT.

Just before the wedding, and while the people were assembling at the church, quite an exciting incident occurred. A horse attached to a carriage containing one of the male members of the bridal party was brought to a standstill near the corner. It was restless and began kicking, finally succeeding in getting one of its hind less over the dashboard. Then it staggered up on the sidewalk, scattering a large number of ladies, who had gathered for the purpose of catching a gimpse of the bride. The sole occupant of the carriage succeeded in reaching the ground without damage to his faultiess attire, but badly ruffled in feelings, apparently. The horse was got on all fours without any serious damage to the vehicle or injury to itself.

The souvenirs presented by the groom to the bridesmaids were dainty pearl horseshoe pins, and to the groomsmen scarf-pins, artistically designed, in the wish-bone pattern, and set with pearts. AN EXCITING INCIDENT.
